A Martyr in the Arena.

A martyr stood calmly in the arena, waiting for the guards to call the lion in to dinner, when Commodus, the emperor, touched with compassion, fitted an arrow to his gun, remarking to the prisoner that if he would just turn a little sideways he would put out both his eyes, so that he could not see the lion come in.

"There is one eye about me," said the martyr, calmly, "that you can't shoot out; that will improve after I am dead."

"An what is that eye, sir?" demanded the emperor, with lofty scorn.

"Fertilizer," hoarsely replied the martyr, holding his hankerchief over his face to conceal his emotion.

A choking sob went murmuring all around that immense throng, like a dog trying to get into a smokehouse, and the dry sands of the arena were bathed in the tears of the Roman populace. Commodus was so confused that he swallowed the arrow he was fitting to the bow. The curtain was rung down, the lights turned up, and the audience dismissed, and the next day that martyr appeared on the hills as 'Engagement extraordinary—the leading American humorist, impersonator, and lightning change artist. First night of the Big 4'—[Bob Burdette.

Ma—"I have my doubts about Mr. Gay-fellow, my dear, and wish you had not said 'yes' before consulting me." Daughter—"Why, what is the matter with him him?" "He has no trade, profession or business, that I can discover, and has certainly no expectations, as his relatives are all poor." "But, ma, just think what a good husband he will make. There won't be a quarrel from one year's end to the other." "You think so now, no doubt." "Oh! but, ma, I'm sure of it. He is so amiable." "Perhaps his amiability has not been tested." "Ah! but it has. You know how most men dislike parent-in-law." "Yes." "Well, he said he would not object at all to living with you and pa."—[Philadelphia Call.

The practice of keeping cattle till three or four years old before fattening is much less common now than formerly. The improved breeds of beef cattle mature early. Two-year-old steers of the Short-horn breed are as mature as and average larger than three-year-olds of native stock.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, hips and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a very common attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching and affording a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piquette, Ohio. Sold by McRoberts & Stagg.

A Boy's Story.

Us three boys stole out for a Lark—me and Dick and Jim, it was late at night and a full Dark the moon had doused her glim, we crept to the barn a sli old crowd and brindle's bell unbuckled, and we kicked jim's shins when he talked out loud and pinched him when he chuckled, and then we climbed for the garden patch and we maid the bell rattle, and soon we heard the woodshed latch and a Vois sed "blast them Cattle!" and pa cum out in his Shirt and pants and a lantern and munkied round us, but if we'd bin 3 elephants you bet he couldn't find us, if it hadn't bin for that stupid jim we'd fuled him like a dazy—but jim's a Girl—he can't keep still and ax just like he's crazy, the lantern lited pa up fine but smoked and flared & Flickered, and pagot throwed by a pun-kinvine and jim broke down and snickered, and then you jest should seen pa jump and Us fly helter-skelter i barked my shins on a hickry stump as i cut for a place of abelter. * * * Speakin of hickry reminds me of the way pa warmed my jacket, but you'll see me take that out of the boy which gave away the Ricket.

All the bosh with which Mr. Blaine was trying to delude the country a few weeks ago is coolly swept away by Hugh McCulloch in his masterly report as Secretary of the Treasury. All the campaign lies of the republican organs and orators that the Morrison Bill and the democrats were responsible for the depression, all Mr. Blaine's plausible efforts to make it appear that the tariff must be maintained in its present state—in short the whole basis of the republican campaign on the tariff issue, is 'cast as rubbish to the void!' by President Arthur's and President Lincoln's Secretary of the Treasury, one of the ablest practical financiers, and soundest statesmen who have ever occupied that office.—[Springfield Republican.

Fifteen orange trees near Plant City, Fla., yield this year 150,000 oranges—10,000 to the tree. These trees are about forty years old, and furnish another illustration of the persistent vitality of the orange tree in Florida. One hundred and fifty thousand oranges at a cent each is $15,000, but the reader should not, from this fact, jump to the conclusion that fortunes are made without risk and great labor raising oranges in Florida.

In sinking a well at White Plains, Nevada, after striking salt water and hot water at different depths, wood was found in considerable quantities 1,650 feet below the surface. At 2,100 feet no coal, fresh water had been found.

FREE DISTRIBUTION.

What causes the great rush at McRoberts & Stagg's Drug Store? The free distribution of sample bottles of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, the most popular remedy for Coughs, Colds, Consumption and Bronchitis now on the market. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00.

A Mother's Hope and Anguish.

Did you ever see a baby die in its mother's arms? The lips livid with the sluggish blood; the little nose pinched and white; the dimples on its cheeks and chin drawn into long hard lines, all tell the father it is dying, and he puts it in its mother's arms, and dashing a tear from his eye, says, "Mother, it is not for long. The death dew is on its brow and we must give it up." But she cannot give it up. She says it must live, and she presses it to her warm bosom and prays in silence once again, and breathes upon its purple fingers, and rocks it to and fro, and chafes its feet and sings so low you scarce can hear it, some sweet lullaby, hoping against hope to woo it back to health and strength. Alas! she cannot stay the hand of death. Its breath comes short and difficult, then ceases, and the father says, "Tis dead," but she, stunned and hoping yet, raises it in her arms. It gasps and she cries that it will live; but no, that faint gasp was the final struggle, and though she again raises it, it breathes no more. Mother's baby is dead.—[R J Burdette.

THE OSTRICH AS A KICKER.—The fact does not appear in works on natural history, but the ostrich is a first-class kicker. The Los Angeles Express relates that Dr. Skechley, who has charge of the ostrich farm at Anaheim, was plucking one of the birds a few days ago. When they pluck them a stocking is kept on the head to blind the bird. While he can not see he is quiet, but if his blinkers get uncovered then he "goes for" the plucker. The Doctor moved his arm so as to disturb the stocking, and instantly he saw what was done and went head first out of the pen, not caring for any more plumes just then. As he tumbled head first over the fence, the bird—he was a jack one, of course—let fly a kick which, striking a fence-board, made toothpicks of a whole panel length. The mule's occupation as a kicker is gone in this country since the ostrich came.

Gov. Crittenden, of Missouri, is reported in Washington City modestly advertising himself for a seat in Cleveland's Cabinet. He will content himself with the Secretaryship of Interior. Mr. Crittenden has been quite conspicuous as a gubernatorial failure in Missouri, and the same sort of talents he exercises in keeping out of jail probably will keep him out of the Cabinet.—[N. Y. World.

A young lady of Milwaukee has just received $3,000 damages in a breach of promise suit for expenses incurred in preparing for the wedding, and for great mental anguish suffered.

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko Cough and Lung Syrup, unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceived. Price, 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by McRoberts & Stagg.

Joseph Pulitzer's Career.

It is singular what wonderful changes a few years can bring to a man. Joe Pulitzer, of the New York World, has a singular career. Not many years ago he was a stover-dore on the levees at St. Louis. Afterwards he became a coachman for Capt. Jas. B. Eads, of jetty fame. Then an accident gave him a chance to run for the Legislature of Missouri and he was elected. He made something of a mark in this position and got a start. Afterward he secured an interest in a German paper at St. Louis, which prospered in his hands, and he took quite an important hand in local affairs. He and Carl Schurz were in the newspaper and the Greeley movement together. He sold his German daily at a profit, then bought the Post-Dispatch for a song and it became worth half a million in five years. He sought a broader field of work in New York, got hold of the World which was then a charity patient, and has made it a very valuable property. Now having been about two years a resident of New York city he is elected to Congress from a district in which he does not live and never will reside.—[Philadelphia Times.

It is a remarkable fact that Gov. Cleveland has never filled out the full term of any office. He has been elected to official positions three times before and each time has been obliged to resign to accept a higher trust. As he has now reached the top of the ladder he will probably be allowed to serve the people to the end of his term. It is significant that one man—Don N. Lockwood of Buffalo—has presented his name to all four of the conventions that nominated him. He is known as Cleveland's "discoverer."—[South Kentuckian.

"What do you think?" said Clara: "that horrid Tom Brown proposed to me last evening. He hummed and hawed a long time, but finally spunked up courage to ask for my hand." "And what did you say, dear?" asked Della. "Say? Why, I told him I couldn't be so cruel as to burden him with a third hand, when he didn't know what to do with the two he already had—the awkward booby!"—[Boston Globe.

W. P. WALTON.

GUS FINLEY murdered a man in Prestonburg, Floyd county, and his lawyers to save his neck, advanced the plea that he was insane drunk. The case was a very atrocious one and the jury held that notwithstanding his condition he should suffer death. The case was taken to the Court of Appeals which has just decided that drunkenness is no excuse for crime and that Finley is as much responsible for his deed as if duly sober. The decision is a most gratifying one. Frequently the plea is put forward to excuse crime when it ought to aggravate the charge and many a man has put himself under the influence of liquor to do that which he would not have the nerve to do under other circumstances.

SPEAKING of Douglas Sherley's new book, the "Story of a Digger," the Louisville Times says "some of the thoughts and theories lack many centuries of being new, or even middle aged, and the reader finds nothing in the treatment of them in the present case to condone their resurrection. In fact, after a careful perusal of "The Story of a Digger," one is led to wonder why a man who handles the weapon so inartistically should "frolic with the utensil" at all." The edition only numbers 99 and each is to have the autograph of the aesthetic author, all for the insignificant price of $10 a volume.

THE Courier Journal makes this point: "In the States which the Republicans designate as Northern, and in which they claim Mr. Blaine received such an overwhelming majority, there were cast 7,044, 650 votes, of which Mr. Blaine received 3, 586,358, or just a fraction over one per cent. over half, 50.9 being the real per cent. And so leaving out of consideration the other States of the Union, this nineteenth of one per cent. majority in the North represents the great popular will which has been outraged by the election of Grover Cleveland."

MR. CLEVELAND has taken the pains to correct the republican lie that he and Mr. Hendricks had disagreed. He says "it was not simply false; it was malicious and malicious. A man could go to sleep and dream of nothing more utterly, wholly false than that. I doubt if two men comparatively strangers, could ever give one another a more cordial greeting than was the greeting between Mr. Hendricks and myself. We spoke together for barely fifteen minutes, and our intercourse was more than friendly; it was warm and thoroughly cordial."

JAMES G. BLAINE's arrival in Washington Friday was attended by no popular demonstration whatever, though Halsted says he promptly suppressed a serenade which some of his admirers wished to perpetrate. As no other paper but his mentions the matter, it was no doubt never heard of until it originated in the Cincinnati office. The divinity, which in the imagination of many people seemed erstwhile to hedge about the person of Blaine, is now hedging now to its alarming extent.

THE Covington Commonwealth accused Gov. Knott of plagiarism from Col. W. P. Breckinridge in the line which headed his Thanksgiving proclamation: "The Lord has done great things for us; whereof we are glad." Thereupon brother Wallace Gruelle began searching the scriptures and found that the words are found in the 31 verse of the 126 Psalm. Bro. Casey seems to be behind in his biblical education.

AN exchange says: "As the pension payment for the present quarter is $17,000,000, the pensioners are drawing upon the Treasury at the rate of $68,000,000 a year. Thousands of persons are receiving pensions who know they are not entitled to them, and the excuse they make to themselves is that they might as well have a pension as others who deserve it no more than themselves."

BECAUSE Secretary of the Treasury McCulloch's report is so strong a plea for tariff reform and gives the lie direct to all the republican speeches and campaign documents of the late canvass, the radical senate is hesitating about confirming his appointment. McCulloch was Lincoln's Secretary and one of the best that has ever filled the office.

ARTHUR intimates that he will accept the Senatorship of New York, if the republicans offer it unanimously. Of course he will and he will do it even if the offer is by a bare majority. Whitelaw Reid won't though because "nobody will ask him, sir," she said.

A CHICAGO paper says that Gen. Logan has bought a spelling-book, an English grammar and a work on etiquette, and will undertake to fit himself for the republican Presidential nomination in 1888.

SECRETARY Chandler reports that our alleged navy cost the last fiscal year $17, 292,607 for maintenance and repairs. And yet we haven't a single vessel that is entirely seaworthy.

FIVE masked robbers side-tracked a train on the Little Rock, Mississippi & Texas R. R. Saturday night and ordering the passengers to hold up their hands relieved them of watches and valuables to the amount of $4,000 and the express safe of $2,000. Then they quietly disappeared and the train proceeded.

—A shooting affray at Gatesville, Texas, Saturday, resulted in the death of three well-known farmers and the wounding of four others.

—A war between the old and new gas companies in Louisville has reduced the price from $1.80 to $1. with prospects of a further cut.

—The Railroad Gazette reports that 3, 509 miles of new road has been built this year, not much over a third of the construction of 1882.

—It is said that there are 1,600 kinds of pears, 1,500 sorts of apples, 150 plums, more than 100 varieties of gooseberries, and about 125 strawberries.

—The trial of Cornelson, who caused the death of Judge Reid is in progress at Mt. Sterling. It is a pity he can not be legally hung for the offense.

—Mrs. Dick Long, of Madison, hit her little six-year-old daughter on the head with a small stick which threw her into convulsions and caused her death.

—Bradstreet's reports the cotton crop clean picked and marketed, grading high, and less than 300,000 bales short of last year, notwithstanding the long drought.

—Chairman Buckner says the Banking and Currency Committee will endeavor to secure the passage of a bill to secure a national bank system and avert financial depression.

—A Cincinnati mother scolded her daughter of 15 for losing an umbrella, which offended the little Miss so she jumped into the river, but was rescued before life was extinct.

—Mr. Blaine has wigged out of his libel suit against the Sentinel and sheathed the weapon with which he was to puncture Shoemaker. He is at present taking in drapery at the dinners of various New Yorkers.

—Cook Teets a blind man, was hanged at Owen Sound, Ont., Friday. He murdered his wife. He had married her a short time previous to her death, getting the insurance of $4,400 on her life payable to himself.

—Dock Cheatham, fifty years old, living near Williamsburg, Washington county, was found dead in bed with seven bullet holes in his body, evidently murdered in his sleep. Cheatham was on bad terms with his family, and was disliked in the community.

—When the residence of Stephen Goodwin, at Pulham, Mitchell county, Ga., was opened Friday morning, the three dead bodies of Mr. Goodwin, his housekeeper, Mrs. Malinda Gregory, and her son Richard were found dead and horribly mutilated.

—There are said to be 15,000 office holders in Washington, of whom about 5,000 are under the protection of the civil service law. The result of this is that 10,000 office holders are quite sure that March 4th, should be written "March forth."

—The fire losses for November in the United States and Canada the New York Daily Commercial Bulletin estimates at $7, 900,000. This is largely in excess of the average November fire waste since the Boston fire. The eleven months' fire loss is computed at $100,000,900.

—Mr. Beecher says: "I hope Cleveland will give nothing in his Cabinet to the Independents. We went in for right, and as soon as the disinterestedness is taken away down goes the independence. No, this country proposes holding Mr. Cleveland and the democratic party responsible for this administration. The principal thing I hope to see is a revival of business in the South."

—Mr. Mitchell's bill to pension General Grant, introduced in the Senate, will give the veteran $40,000 to start with if it becomes a law and $5,000 per year during the remainder of his existence. It is claimed that the sum of $250,000 raised for him by the rich men of the country a few years ago was so badly invested that very little income is at present derived from it.

—Sunday's New York World was equal to 360,000 complete eight page papers. It was worked on six presses between 8 o'clock in the evening and 5 o'clock in the morning, time being allowed for a change of plates, cleaning the press and substituting rollers. The amount of white paper consumed was 40,000 pounds, making necessary the use of a quarter of a ton of ink. This monster edition of the World required 244 miles of paper as it comes from the rolls. Three tons of metal were used in providing stereotype plates for the presses. The 198 columns of type will measure one-twentieth of a mile in length.

The aged and decrepit army of jokes based on the Congressional Record have started on their travels once more. This is one of the terrors of early winter.

—Messrs. Handman & Haas, of this place, have already shipped this season to Boston and New York over 20,000 dressed turkeys. Mr. Handman says if those who raise turkeys for sale would feed them more corn so as to make them weigh from 12 to 15 pounds they could pay better prices to farmers and get better prices themselves.

—A two story frame dwelling on Fourth Street opposite the jail, the property of a colored man named Harrison Wickliffe, caught fire from sparks from an adjoining chimney Sunday evening about 11 o'clock. The roof was nearly burned off and the upper story badly damaged before the fire was subdued. Loss about $300. No insurance.

The other is Silas Cunningham, a little coon who broke into a grocery store last month, and who is waiting for a trial. We are getting to be very peaceful.

—It is conceded by every one who was fortunate enough to attend the German Friday night last, that it was the toniest one of the season. The music was good, the floor in splendid condition and all dancers in the hall seemed determined to dance their best and enjoy themselves immeasurably. Miss Allie Dunn, of Richmond, and W. J. Kinnaird, of this city, led and were followed by twelve couples as good dancers as can be found anywhere. The favors were very pretty and well chosen, and everything possible was done to make it an affair long to be remembered. The strangers present were Miss Allie Dunn, of Richmond, Miss Mary Annie Wilmore, of Nicholasville, Miss Kate Brown, of London, Miss Addie Taylor, of Bryantville and Miss Mary Ferguson, of Covington.

CHAPTER I.

A PRAYER AND A VOW.

When this story of my life, or of such portions of my life as present any out-of-the-common features, is read, it will be found that I have committed errors of judgment—that I have sinned not only socially, but also against the law of the land. In excuse I can plead but two things—the strength of love, the weakness of human nature.

If these carry no weight with you, throw the book aside. You are too good for me; I am too human for you. We cannot be friends. Read no further.

I need say nothing about my childhood; nothing about my boyhood. Let me hurry on to early manhood—to that time when the wonderful dreams of youth begin to leave one; when the impulse which can drive a strong man; when one has learned to count the cost of every rash step; when the transient and fitful flames of the boy have settled down to a steady, glowing fire which will burn until only ashes are left; when the strength, the nerve, the intellect, is or should be at its height; when, in short, one's years number thirty.

Yet what was I then? A sordid, morose, disappointed man; without ambition, without care for the morrow; without a goal or object in life. Breathing, eating, drinking, as by instinct. Rising in the morning, and wishing the day was over; lying down at night, and caring little whether the listless eyes I closed might open again or not.

And why? Ah! to know why you must sit with me as I sit lonely over my glowing fire one winter night. You must read my thoughts; the pictures of my past must rise before you as they rise before me. My sorrow, my hate, my love must be yours. You must, indeed, be my very self.

You may begin this retrospect with triumph. You may go back to the day when, after having passed my examination with high honors, I, Basil North, was duly entitled to write M. D. after my name, and set to work to win fame and fortune by doing my best toward relieving the sufferings of my fellow creatures. You may say, as I said then, as I say now, "A noble career; a life full of interest and usefulness."

You may see me full of hope and courage, and ready for any amount of hard work; settling down in a large provincial town, resolved to beat out a practice for myself. You may see how, after the usual initiatory struggles, my footing gradually grew firmer; how my name became familiar; how at last I seemed to be in a fair way of winning success.

You may see how for a while a dream brightened my life; how that dream faded and left gloom in its place. You may see the woman I loved.

No, I am wrong. Her you cannot see. Only I myself can see Philippa as I saw her then—as I see her now.

Philippa as I saw her then—as I see her now. Heaven! how fair she was! How glorious her rich, dark beauty! How different from the pink-white and yellow dolls whom I have seen exalted as the types of perfection! Warm Southern blood ran through her veins and tinged her clear brown cheek with color. Her modesty was an English woman's; but it was Spain that gave her daughter that exquisite grace, those wonderful dark eyes and long, curled lashes, that mass of soft black hair, that passionate, impulsive nature, and perhaps that queen-like carriage and dignity. The English mother may have given the girl many good gifts, but her beauty came from the father, whose occupation I have not been able to ascertain, seems to have spent most of his time in this country.

When did I learn to love her? Ask me, rather, when did we first meet? Even then, as my eyes fell upon the girl, I knew, as by revelation, that for me life and her love meant one and the same thing. Till that moment there was no woman in the world the sight of whom would have quickened my pulse by a beat. I had read and heard of such love as this. I had laughed at it. There seemed no room for such an engrossing passion in my busy life. Yet all at once I loved as man has never loved before; and as I sat to-night and gaze into the fire I tell myself that the objectless life I am leading is the only one possible for the man who loved but failed to win Philippa.

Our first meeting was brought about in the most prosaic way. Her mother, who suffered from a chronic disease, consulted me professionally. My visits, first those of a doctor, soon became those of a friend, and I was free to go with the girl to the best of my ability.

Philippa and her mother lived in a small house on the outskirts of the town. They were not rich people, but had enough to keep the pinch of poverty from their lives. The mother was a sweet, quiet, ladylike woman, who bore her sufferings with resignation. Her health was, indeed, wretched. The only thing which seemed likely to benefit her was a continual change of air and scene. After attending her for about six months, I was in conscience bound to indorse the opinion of her former medical advisers, and tell her it would be well for her to try another change.

My heart was heavy as I gave this advice. If adopted, it meant that Philippa and I must part.

But why, during those six months, had I not, passionately in love as I was, won the young girl's heart? Why did she not leave me as my affianced bride? Why did I not let her leave me at all?

The answer is short. She loved me not. Not that she had ever told me so in words, but never acted her words for me.

But she must have known—she must have known! When I was with her, most of the time, every action of mine must have told her the truth. Women are not fools or blind. A man, loving as I did, who can conceal the true state of his feelings must be more than mortal.

I had not spoken; I dared not speak. Better uncertainty with hope than certainty with despair. The day on which Philippa refused my love would be as the day of death to me.

Besides, what had I to offer her? Although succeeding fairly well for a beginner, at present I could only ask the woman I made my wife to share comparative poverty. And Philippa! Ah! I would have wrapped Philippa in luxury! All that wealth could buy ought to be hers. Had you seen her in the glory of her fresh young beauty, you would have smiled at the presumption of the man who could expect such a being to become the wife of a hard working and as yet ill-paid doctor. You would have felt that she should have had the world at her feet.

Had I thought that she loved me, I might perhaps have dared to hope she would even then have been happy as my wife. But she did not love me. Moreover, she was ambitious.

She knew—small blame to her—how beautiful she was. Do I wrong her when I say that in those days she looked for the gift of rank and riches from the man who loved her? She knew that she was a queen among women, and expected a queen's dues. (Sweetest, are my words cruel? They are the cruellest I have spoken, or shall speak, against you. Forgive them!)

We were friends—great friends. Such friendship is love's bane. It buoys false hopes; it lulls to security; it leads astray; it is a staff which breaks suddenly, and wounds the hand which leans upon it. So little it seems to need to make friendship grow into love; and yet how seldom that little is added! The love which begins with hate or dislike is often luckier than that which begins with friendship. Lovers cannot be friends.

Philippa and her mother left my neighborhood. They went to London for a while. I heard from them occasionally, and once or twice, when in town, called upon them. Time went by. I worked hard at my profession the while, striving, by sheer toil, to drive away the dream from my life. Alas! I strove in vain. To love Philippa was to love her forever!

One morning a letter came from her. I tore it open. The news it contained was grievous. Her mother had died suddenly. Philippa was alone in the world. So far as I knew, she had not a relative left; and I believed, perhaps hoped, that, save myself, she had no friend.

I needed no time for consideration. That afternoon I was in London. If I could not comfort her in her great sorrow, I could at least sympathize with her, could undertake the management of the many business details which are attendant upon a death.

Poor Philippa! She was glad to see me. Through her tears she flashed me a look of gratitude. I did all I could for her, and stayed in town until the funeral was over. Then I was obliged to think of going home. What was to become of the girl?

With or kin she had none, nor did she mention the name of any friend who would be willing to receive her. As I suspected, she was absolutely alone in the world. As soon as my back was turned she would have no one on whom she could count for sympathy or help.

It must have been her utter loneliness which urged me, in spite of my better judgment, in spite of the grief which still oppressed her, to throw myself at her feet and declare the desire of my heart. My words I cannot recall, but I think—I know I pleaded eloquently. Such passion as mine gives power and intensity to the most unpracticed speaker. Yet long before my appeal was ended I knew that I pleaded in vain. Her eyes, her manner, told me she loved me not.

Then, remembering her present helpless condition, I checked myself. I begged her to forget the words I had spoken; not to answer them now; to let me say them again in some months' time. Let me still be her friend, and render her such service as I could.

She shook her head; she held out her hand. The first action meant the refusal of my love; the second, the acceptance of my friendship. I schooled myself to calmness, and we discussed her plans for the future. She was lodging in a house in a quiet, respectable street near Regent's Park. She expressed her intention of staying on here for a while.

"What alone!" I exclaimed. "Why not? What have I to fear? Still, I am open to reason if you can suggest another plan."

I could suggest no other. Philippa was past twenty-one and would at once succeed to whatever money had been her mother's. This was enough to live upon. She had no friends, and must live somewhere. Why should she not stay on at her present lodging? Nevertheless, I trembled as I thought of this beautiful girl all alone in London. Why could she not love me? Why could she not be my wife? It needed all my self-restraint to keep me from breaking afresh into passionate appeals.

As she would not give me the right to dispose of her future, I could do nothing more. I bade her a sad farewell, then went back to my home to conquer my unhappy love, or to suffer from its fresh inroads.

Conquer it! Such love as mine is never conquered. It is a man's life. Philippa was never absent from my thoughts. Let my frame of mind be gay or grave, Philippa was always present.

Now and then she wrote to me, but her letters told me little as to her mode of life; they were short friendly epistles, and gave me little hope.

Yet I was not quite hopeless. I felt that I had been too hasty in asking her for her love so soon after her mother's death. Let her recover from the shock; then I will try again. Three months was the time which in my own mind I resolved should elapse before I again approached her with words of love. Three months! How wearily they dragged themselves away!

Opening the Car Window. Maybe a man feels happy and proud and flattered and envied and blessed among men when he sees a pretty girl trying to raise the window of a railroad car and jumps up and gets ahead of the other boys, and says: "Allow me?" oh, so courteously, and she says: "Oh, if you please; I would be so glad," and the other male passengers turn green with envy, and he leans over on the back of the seat and tackles the window in a knowing way with one hand, if peradventure he may toss it arily with a simple turn of the wrist; but it kind of holds on, and he takes hold with both hands, but it sort of doesn't go with any alarming extent, and he pounds it with his fist, but it only seems to settle "a little closer into place," and then he comes around and she gets out of the seat to give him a fair chance and he grapples that window and bows up his back and tugs and pulls and sweats and grunts and strains and his hat falls off and his suspender buttons fetch loose and his vest buckle parts and his face gets red, and his feet slip, and people laugh, and an irreverent young man in a remote seat grunts and groans every time he lifts, and cries out: "Now then altogether!" as if in mockery, and he bursts his collar button, and the pretty young lady, vexed at being made so conspicuous, says in her ickest manner, "Oh never mind—thank you, it doesn't make any difference," and calmly goes and sits down in another seat, and that weary man gathers himself together and reads a book upside down—oh, doesn't he feel just good. Maybe, but don't be fool enough to extend any of your sympathy. He doesn't need it. —(Burlington Hawkeye.)

Pay 100 Cents on the Dollar. What I started out to say, my boy, was this. If you are in debt, carry yourself calmly as the great heroes do. If you owe a merchant $50, don't be in too big a hurry to pay it. Just let him sweat over it a little while, until you see how much he is going to pay on his own debts. Then you can prorate with him.

But, on second thought, I don't want you to do that way. You want to reform this great evil, do you not? Well, the best way to bring about that reform is to walk up and pay that $50 you owe, just the first minute you can collar the money. If you owe it to a rascal, never mind, it is a just debt on your part, and don't keep the conscience of the "assignment" operator. You pay 100 cents on the dollar every time.

Then by and by as you and your neighbors do this and teach your neighbors so to do, there will arise a generation of men in America who will pay 100 cents on the dollar, and Canada will become a howling wilderness, untenantable save by the wild bear and the wolf who will help the wilderness howl.

Bank cashiers will sleep at home and confidential clerks will spend their vacation in town, and a man's salary will pay for everything he gets. But the only way to bring about this preparatory millennium, my boy, is for you to pay that $50 when you owe it—every cent of it. No matter how much the other man owes or how little he pays. You pay your debts, my boy and I will know at least one man to whom I won't be afraid to loan money without collateral security or gilt edged paper.

The Tollesboro debate conducted by Rev. J. W. Fitch, of the M. E. Church, South, and Elder J. S. Kendrick, of the Christian Church, closed last Tuesday, after six days continuance. The debate was largely attended, and the very best feeling seemed to prevail throughout the entire discussion, and the debaters conducted themselves and the discussion to the entire satisfaction of their respective friends.

Rev. J. S. Sims and Elder Morrison were moderators.

I will tell how I manage my milk in winter to get the cream to rise. I strain my morning's milk in large tin pans, set it on the warm stove, cover it and keep the stove just warm enough to bear your hand on. I let it remain there until I go about dinner, and the cream will be thick enough to skim. I do my night milking the same, and always get all the cream off my milk, no matter how cold it is. —(Housekeeper.)

1831 THE CULTIVATOR 1885 COUNTRY GENTLEMAN!

THE BEST OF THE AGRICULTURAL WEEKLIES

The Country Gentleman is the leading journal of American Agriculture. Its contents are practical, its information reliable, its advice sound, its quality of paper and style of publication, it occupies the first rank. It is believed to have no superior in either of the three chief divisions of Farm Crops and Processes, Horticulture & Fruit-Growing, Live Stock and Dairying.

While it includes all the departments of rural interest, such as the Poultry Yard, Entomology, Bee-Keeping, Green House and Grapery, Veterinary, and all the questions and answers, it is a summary of the news of the week. Its Market Reports are unusually complete, and such attention is paid to the prospects of the crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and When to Sell. It is liberally illustrated, and is intended to supply, in a continually increasing degree, and in the best sense of the term, a LIVE AGRICULTURAL PAPER. Although Country Gentleman has been enlarged by increasing its size from 16 to 20 pages weekly, the terms continue as heretofore, when paid strictly in advance. One copy, one year, $2.00; four copies, $7.00, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of club; ten copies, $5.00, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of club.

JOHN H. STARIN'S GOLD.

AN EX-CONGRESSMAN'S CAREER.

From Country Doctor to Millionaire—
Seven Millions in His Coffer—His Generosity and Resemblance to "Brother Jonathan."

[N. Y. Journal.]

From a country doctor with an annual income of $1,000, chiefly in bad debts, John H. Starin has become the Rich Admiral of the commerce of the New York rivers and canals. He even once held a postmaster's office at twenty dollars a year, and thought himself more than fortunate. This sum of twenty dollars paid for his year's clothing and left him sufficient wherewith to "spark" the pretty young girls of Sammons-ville, in Fulton County, New York.

How different are his surroundings now. Look at his beautiful mansion in West Thirty-eighth street, furnished with its costly ebony furniture and its thousand and one evidences of the vast wealth of its owner, and then compare it with the humble cottage in which he first saw the light of day sixty years ago. That Mr. Starin often recalls his early poverty has been clearly demonstrated in the last few years. There are those who say of Mr. Starin, and of all such men, that their liberality is a carefully calculated advertisement; that the free excursions given to the newsboys, the police and the veterans of the rebellion serve to advertise the excursions for which the public pays; that the frequency with which the papers are called upon to mention Mr. Starin's name attracts the public to Glen Island, and that this generosity, like virtue, is its own reward and pays an ample interest upon the original investment. If this were all true it would not be a fault in Mr. Starin. On the contrary, the world would be very much brighter and better and happier if many other men would choose the same mode of advertising themselves and their business. The advertisement which gives a day's pleasure to the poor, ragged newsboys, to the much-pestered police, and to the veterans who are forgotten and neglected by the country they faithfully served is an excellent thing to imitate. It is safe to say, however, that Admiral Starin has no such ulterior views in his benevolence. In business he can drive as shrewd a bargain as any of his critics; but out of business he is a sort of all-the-year-round Santa Claus, delighted in giving because it is his nature, and happiest when he has succeeded in making others happy.

Mr. Starin was born at the little village of Sammons-ville, in Fulton County, on August 17, 1825. He received a classical education, due to severe pinching and sacrifice on the part of his parents. Young Starin determined to become a doctor, and in 1842 he commenced the study of medicine, but he soon found that his talents were more practical than professional. Three years later he opened a drug store in Fultonville and continued it for over thirteen years. In the meantime he had, of course, taken an interest in local politics, and from 1848 to 1852 he was the Postmaster of Fultonville. His drug store was the centre of the politics and gossip of the county, and when the Republican party was organized Mr. Starin became one of the earliest and most enthusiastic supporters of the new platform. The defeat of General Scott cost him his Postmaster-ship.

It was in 1856 that Mr. Starin turned his attention to the freightage business on the Erie Canal. At first he hired canal boats; then bought them; then built them. From canal boats he took the easy step to steamers, and from the Erie Canal he sailed out into New York Harbor and Long Island Sound. Year by year his fleet of vessels increased in size and importance. At first he carried freight only; then he began to develop the passenger traffic, and now he has the two branches of transportation under his control.

The largest cattle ranch in the country belongs to Richard King, of Texas. It comprises upward of 800,000 acres, all under fence, and nearly 200,000 head of cattle, horses and sheep. This ranch has been eagerly sought by English, French and Dutch capitalists, but the successful competitor is the United States Land and Investment Company, of New York, who have just concluded a purchase at $6,500,000 for the entire property. The company anticipate an annual income of nearly $1,500,000 from this source, as the increase of cattle is about 85 per cent.

"Doctor, I want to thank you for your great patent medicine." "It helped you didn't it?" asked the doctor, very much pleased. "It helped me wonderfully." "How many bottles did you find necessary to take?" "Oh! I didn't take any of it. My uncle took one bottle, and I am his sole heir."

The writer of a recent fashion item to the effect that "draperies have not entirely disappeared but are very much simpler," had probably been gazed at a ballet troupe.

FREE DISTRIBUTION.

What causes the great rush at McRoberts & Stagg's Drug Store? The free distribution of sample bottles of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, the most popular remedy for Coughs, Colds, Consumption and Bronchitis now on the market. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulence, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a very common attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching and affording a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by McRoberts & Stagg.

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko Cough and Lung Syrup, unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceived. Prices, 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by McRoberts & Stagg.

Although Mr. Starin has left the town of these many years he is by no means forgotten there; nor has he parted with his maternal interest in the country. Twice his old fellow-countrymen have elected him to Congress, and three years ago his name was presented to the Republican State Convention as a candidate for Governor. With his usual generosity he gave way for Secretary Folger, and Mr. Starin seemed thoroughly well pleased that he did. His son-in-law, Mr. Howard Carroll, the well-known journalist, with less prescience, accepted the nomination for Congressman-at-large against General Slocum. He was defeated, and did not ask: "Is General Slocum here?" the day after the election.

Mr. Starin's double life as a metropolitan and a ruralist is evident in his occupation. He is a director of the North River Bank here, and of the Mohawk River Bank also. To pen a portrait of Mr. Starin one has only to take the usual picture of Brother Jonathan, grizzle the blonde hair and chin tuft, and make the body a trifle stouter, and there is a capital portrait of the ex-Congressman.

Last night the Metropolitan Hotel one of Mr. Starin's friends said to a Journal reporter: "With all of his wealth, and to put a mode a climax upon it it is not less than $7,049,800, he has no valet; his habits of life are too simple and unostentatious; he has numerous clerks and hundreds of other employees, and he is a hero to all of these men, with whom he is brought into the most frank and intimate intercourse and relations. To hear his clerks speak of him to see their eyes glisten with pride and pleasure when they are permitted to utter his praises; to note the affectionate respect and esteem with which they refer to him—these are the best possible proofs that the public man, who has made himself so popular, is no less worthy of popularity in his private relations, and that his generosity is as genuine as it is remarkable."

A Curious Claim.

[N. Y. Evening Post.]

A curious claim pending in the Pension Office at Washington, belonging to the war of 1812, is one presented by the widow of Anthony Cosio, alias Anthony Casio. It cites that Anthony Casio, who died in 1870, at Ann Arbor, Mich., joined the British forces in Canada, that he deserted in 1814, crossed on the ice to the American side of the river, and entered the United States service. After serving here six months he was retaken by the British at a point six miles below Niagara Falls, court-martialed and sentenced to death. His sentence was, however, commuted to 300 lashes, from the result of which he never recovered, and for which a pension was granted him. This pension his widow asks to have increased.

An Electric Awning.

[Philadelphia Telegraph.]

A small boy leaned against the iron awning posts of the St. Marc Hotel last night and felt a peculiar sensation. He tried to free himself from the post, but was held by an invisible power. Then he screamed and cried for help, and a crowd gathered. There was a suspicion that an electric lamp which was burning serenely overhead was at the bottom of the trouble, and a messenger was quickly sent to the United States Electric Lighting Company for an electrician. When the latter arrived he glanced at the lamp and saw the trouble in a moment. The light had been blown against the awning and was touching the iron at the point where the iron rods were coupled. He moved the lamp, the current left the awning and the boy was free. In the meantime, however, several of the crowd had experimented and received shocks through the iron ribs of their umbrellas.

The story of the boy's experience is a good one, and it is a pity that it is not a fortune of $150,000 by the speculations. Perhaps this is to create sympathy for him.

A NEAT SUGGESTION.—This being an era of good feeling in the first degree, why would it not be a graceful tribute to a vanquished foe for Mr. Cleveland to invite Mrs. Lockwood to assist him in opening the inauguration ball?—[New York Tribune.]

Easy to See Through.

How can a watch—no matter how costly—be expected to go when the mainspring "won't operate?" How can any one be well when his stomach, liver or kidneys are out of order? Of course you say, "He can not." Yet thousands of people drag along miserably in that condition; not sick, but not able to work with comfort and energy. How foolish when a bottle or two of Parker's Tonic would set them all right. Try it, and get back your health and spirits.

Positive Cure for Piles.

To the people of this country we would say that we have been given the agency of Dr. Marchal's Italian Pile Ointment—emphatically guaranteed to cure or money refunded—Internal, External, Blind, Bleeding or Itching Piles. Price 50 cents a box. No cure, no pay. Penny & McAllister, Druggists.

Daughters, Wives and Mothers.

We emphatically guarantee Dr. Marchal's Catholicon, a female remedy, to cure Female Diseases, such as ovarian troubles, inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and displacement or bearing down feeling, Irregularities, Barrenness, Change of Life, Leucorrhoea, besides many weaknesses springing from the above, like Headache, Bloating, Spinal Weakness, Sleeplessness, Nervous debility, Palpitation of the Heart, &c. For sale by druggists. Prices $1 and $1.50 per bottle. Send to Dr. Marchal, Utica, N. Y., for pamphlet, free. For sale by Penny & McAllister, Druggists.

DIREFUL PREDICTIONS.

BLANTON DUNCAN AS A PROPHET.

storms, Earthquakes and Pestilence Foretold By the Distinguished Ex-Politician—The Bible the Source of His Inspiration.

[Letter to N. Y. Star.]

We have received a long article from the pen of Blanton Duncan, of Louisville, Ky., in which startling predictions are made. Duncan takes the Bible predictions for his basis and foretells "famines, and pestilence, and earthquakes," which he adds, have already begun, the Ischia and lava quakes, which were more lately succeeded by shakes in England, and the North Atlantic coast of America, being referred to for verification of what he says. The words of St. John are quoted:

"And every mountain and island were moved out of their place."

"And there is to come: A great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth—so mighty an earthquake and so great. And the cities of the Nation shall fall and every island shall away, and the mountains were not found. And there fell upon men a great hail out of Heaven, every man about the weight of a talent."

Mr. Duncan would add a shudder:

"Another sign of remarkable significance has been occurring. Repeated hail-storms, during which many persons have been destroyed and houses have been riddled as though cannon had been fired against them. This is foretold as one of the terrible visitations from which we can escape. Blocks of ice, 'every stone about the weight of a talent.' Seven pounds is a talent. So far have said this is impossible. Yet, within the past month, in Europe and the United States, these masses of ice, described as weighing six or seven pounds, have fallen, carrying destruction to man and beast and houses."

"Do such things mean nothing? Is it chance alone which sends to England the phenomenon of 150 degrees of heat—nearly as high as the highest ever recorded in Africa by Humboldt, 159? To those who know the English climate and the English this will be seen to be even a greater phenomenon than their earthquake. At 83 degrees in the shade the English are almost melting. The personal discomfort of such heat as yesterday's appeals to every inhabitant as the most startling incident within the memory of man."

"We have the cholera started in Europe, and we must not expect to escape pestilence. These very earthquake shocks—with such destructive of life and property—will produce disease. The passage of the great planets through the nodes of electricity, which flow out in space from the sun's equator, must produce great disturbances. Noxious gases from the crust of the earth must be liberated in immense quantities, infecting the air and having deleterious effect upon not only animal but also vegetable life. We have had extraordinary cold in every month this year in many localities. A frost in September of great area and severity would do more destruction in a night for the United States than a year of war. We know from the past that coincidences of great pestilence did occur with the passage of Jupiter or Saturn through the electrical solar nodes, as for example, in June, 1579. Jupiter's passage was followed by a great outbreak of cholera in Asia, and 1,000,000 people died in a year. In 1865, the cholera raged everywhere—United States included—Jupiter and Saturn both passing through these nodes."

"These are merely coincidences. We have no proof that disease can or can not be affected by planetary action. It is like all sciences, mere conjecture. But we do know one fact: The great planets have passed through the spectral nodes at or about the time of the outbreak of every one of the great epidemics, which history records since 767 years before the birth of Christ, when Saturn was in perihelion and had passed through solar node to 85 degrees, and Jupiter was at the corresponding node of 263. The plague ravaged every known inhabitable spot in the world that year."

"The scoffers say this means nothing; but science only discovered many of the well-known laws of nature by observing coincidences and deducting therefrom absolute results. Daniel gives to the believers the assurance: 'None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand.'"

An Eccentric Widow.

[N. Y. Medical Journal.]

From a certain piece of property in the French village of Colombes the howls of about forty dogs and the screeches of more than that number of cats are borne to the unwilling ears of the neighboring residents. These animals are described as by no means the choicest of their respective kinds, and it is alleged against them that, besides their unmelodious cries, they give forth odors which make the quarter decidedly unpleasant. There are those, indeed, who aver that the premises on which the animals are kept constitute practically a sort of lazaretto, and that the effluvia arising therefrom are a source of danger to their health. On this account the occupant of the property has been proceeded against in the courts, and, as we learn from the Progress Medical, has been condemned to pay a fine of five francs. The person thus mulcted is an old lady who makes it her business to gather in all the stray dogs and cats that she meets with on the streets.

This lady is no less a person than the widow of the great physiologist, the late M. Claude Bernard, and her eccentric behavior is accounted for in this wise: M. Bernard, as is well known, practiced vivisection, but early in the course of his married life his wife became a violent opponent of the practice, and their disagreement in the matter is understood to have made their life anything but a happy one, and finally to have brought about their separation. M. Bernard having at length died, his relic's old tenderness has risen from its ashes, and, as the story is told, she has gone to work systematically to expiate his offences against the lower animals by showing kindness to as many stray dogs and cats as opportunity may allow; her idea being that, when at length she has succeeded as many distressed brutes as he was the means of slaying, his purgation will have been accomplished vicariously, and her soul and that of her late husband will be ready to meet in Paradise. How unfeeling is of the people of Colombes to interfere with the prosecution of this scheme!

A number of gentlemen were discussing the low prices of hogs a few days ago when one of the party, Geo. D. Jones, said that in 1841 hogs sold in Madison county at $1.25 per hundred. When brought only 25 cents per bushel and corn 37½ cents per bushel.—[Richmond Herald.]

whose occupation I have not been able to ascertain, seems to have spent most of his time in this country.

When did I learn to love her? Ask me, rather, when did we first meet? Even then, as my eyes fell upon the girl, I knew, as by revelation, that for me life and her love meant one and the same thing. Till that moment there was no woman in the world the sight of whom would have quickened my pulse by a beat. I had read and heard of such love as this. I had laughed at it. There seemed no room for such an engrossing passion in my busy life. Yet all at once I loved as man has never loved before; and as I sat tonight and gaze into the fire I tell myself that the objectless life I am leading is the only one possible for the man who loved but failed to win Philippa.

Our first meeting was brought about in the most prosaic way. Her mother, who suffered from a chronic disease, consulted me professionally. My visits, first those of a doctor, soon became those of a friend, and I was free to woo the girl to the best of my ability.

Philippa and her mother lived in a small house on the outskirts of the town. They were not rich people, but had enough to keep the pinch of poverty from their lives. The mother was a sweet, quiet, ladylike woman, who bore her sufferings with resignation. Her health was, indeed, wretched. The only thing which seemed likely to benefit her was a continual change of air and scene. After attending her for about six months, I was in conscience bound to indorse the opinion of her former medical advisers, and tell her it would be well for her to try another change.

My heart was heavy as I gave this advice. I adopted, it meant that Philippa and I must part.

But why, during those six months, had I not, passionately in love as I was, won the young girl's heart? Why did she not leave me as my affianced bride? Why did I let her leave me at all?

The answer is short. She loved me not. Not that she had ever told me so in words, but never asked her in words for her love.

was never absent from my thoughts. Let my frame of mind be gay or grave, Philippa was always present.

Now and then she wrote to me, but her letters told me little as to her mode of life; they were short friendly epistles, and gave me little hope.

Yet I was not quite hopeless. I felt that I had been too hasty in asking her for her love so soon after her mother's death. Let her recover from the shock; then I will try again. Three months was the time which in my own mind I resolved should elapse before I again approached her with words of love. Three months! How wearily they dragged themselves away!

Toward the end of my self-imposed term of probation I fancied that a brighter, gayier tone manifested itself in Philippa's letters. Fool that I was, I augured well from this.

Telling myself that such love as mine must win in the end, I went to London, and once more saw Philippa. She received me kindly. Although her garb was still that of a mourning widow, I thought, had she looked more beautiful. Not long after our first meeting did I wait before I began to "push," she said; "I have forgotten your former words, let us still be friends."

"Never!" I cried passionately. "Philippa, answer me once for all, tell me you can love me!"

She looked at me compassionately. "How can I best answer you?" she said musingly. "The sharpest remedy is perhaps the kindest. Basil, will you understand me when I say it is too late?"

"Too late! What can you mean? Has another—"

The words died on my lips as Philippa, drawing a ring from the fourth finger of her left hand, showed me that it concealed a plain gold circlet. Her eyes met mine imploringly.

"I should have told you before," she said softly, and bending her proud head; "but there were reasons—even now I am pledged to tell no one. Basil, I only show you this because I know you will take no other answer."

The man who fell from the top of the Washington Monument the other day, and was caught by his coat tail on a nail that saved his life, is a type of a good many other persons now in danger of falling from high places in Washington.

I have had and invariably relieved the most severe cases. Trial Bottles of this cure for all Coughs and Lung Diseases may be had free at Tate & Penny's Drug Store. Large size $1.

Easy to See Through.
How can a watch—no matter how costly—be expected to go when the main spring is worn out? How can any one be well when his stomach, liver, kidneys are out of order? Of course you say, "He can not." Yet thousands of people drag along miserably in that condition; not sick and not able to work with comfort and energy. How foolish, when a bottle or two of Parker's Tonic would set them all right. Try it, and get back your health and spirits.

Live Stock and Dairying.

While it includes all minor departments of rural interest, such as the Poultry Yard, Entomology, Bee-Keeping, Green House and Grapery, Veterinary Recipes, Farm Questions and Answers, Fireside Reading, Domestic Economy, and a summary of the news of the week, its Main Reports are unusually complete, and much attention is paid to the prospects of the crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and When to Sell. It is liberally illustrated, and is intended to supply, in a continually increasing degree, and in the best sense of the term, a
